

BUSINESS & ENTERPRISE GAME

SATRO Business Games Helps Students

- Develop skills for the workplace
- Gain an insight into some different job roles
- Work alongside people from the world of work
- Learn about some of the different functions that make up a business

Volunteering

Volunteers are key to engaging and inspiring the students. We are keen for you to share your business knowledge and support students by asking questions to help them to think about their decisions and promote critical thinking.

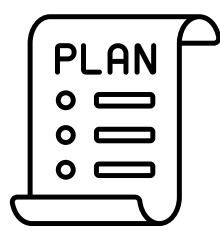

The day is fully facilitated by SATRO and is suitable for anyone with an experience of work, whatever your role or industry.

What Our Volunteers Particularly Enjoy

“The satisfaction of seeing some groups (not all!) move from a fairly chaotic state to an organised cohesive group, all pulling together, and watching some individuals grow in confidence during the day.”

How The Day Works...

The students are put into teams and then complete the following tasks

Students assign roles to themselves and come up with a company name
VOLUNTEERS can support this by asking students why they chose the role. They can talk about the skills they have and what they are hoping to learn.

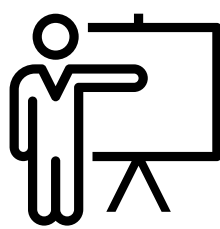

Students design their prototype, initially on paper before making it using the materials provided.
VOLUNTEERS can support by asking students who their target market is and what makes their design unique.

Students then make their first prototype.
VOLUNTEERS will then be assigned the role of negotiator or shop keeper. Negotiators will decide on a price for the team to produce more copies of their prototype set criteria such as deadlines and quality requirements.

Students must manage their cashflow to ensure they can purchase additional supplies. VOLUNTEERS will run the shop and ensure that students have enough money to make purchases.

Students will produce a presentation.
VOLUNTEERS will listen to the presentation, ask questions and give feedback and decide on the best presentation.
